

Industrial Consultant/Trainer

- Diverse work environments
- Close team with job autonomy
- Dynamic, fun and challenging

QEC is a multi service consulting company with an extensive client base. We seek a person with demonstrated experience with the implementation of management systems including quality, environmental, safety, and hazardous substances. In addition we seek someone with experience in developing and presenting training material to adult learners. Industrial knowledge and experience would be an advantage including relevant qualifications or experience. Auditing skills would be advantageous.

This role would suit a person who has an outgoing personality, the ability to learn quickly and enjoys a challenging and varied work environment. In addition we seek a motivated person who can work unsupervised, with high quality output and to deadlines.

The key activities you will undertake include:

- Working with a range of clients to develop and improve their management systems including procedural development and implementation
- Design and delivery of a range of training programmes
- Consultancy activities including hazardous substance management, compliance assessments, report writing, auditing and resource consent work.

Our office is located in Cambridge but we deliver consultancy and training throughout New Zealand so regular travel will be required. Specific training will be provided.
